Montesquieu was born Charles-Louis de Secondat in 1689 at the château of La Bréde in France. He was the son of a Roman equestrian from Arpajon. His early education was provided by a Jesuit priest. Montesquieu's works include The Persian Letters, which was a satirical novel that mocked the British government. He also wrote The Spirit of the Laws, a foundational work in political philosophy. Montesquieu was a member of the French Enlightenment and played a significant role in the development of modern political thought. His theories and ideas continue to influence political discourse and policy-making today.
