FORGOTTEN PATRIOTS SUPPLEMENT, 2008-2011

INTRODUCTION

In 2008, the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution published Forgotten Patriots: African American and American Indian Patriots in the Revolutionary War: A Guide to Service, Sources and Studies. The entire printing of this publication was sold out by early 2011. In January 2012, NSDAR posted the original 2008 publication with a few revisions online for free access to all users.

In the nearly four years since Forgotten Patriots appeared, the researchers who produced the 2008 volume continued to search for additional names and sources relating to African American and American Indian patriots and to record listings of new publications in this subject area. The result of this on-going work is this supplement that was finished in late 2011.

The material provided herein is arranged in the same order as that in the original 2008 publication. Most of the new information in the 2011 supplement is bibliographic, but there are a significant number of new patriots along with new sources identified for some of those men whose names appeared in the earlier book. There is a separate personal name index to the supplement to assist researchers in locating this information.

We offer this 2011 supplement to coincide with the online posting of the 2008 publication and hope that both compilations will prove useful to anyone interested in the history of African Americans, Native Americans, and persons of diverse heritage who supported the American cause in the War for Independence.

The Forgotten is a loose confederation of humans who possess a rare genetic mutation that renders them able to survive Tiberium Toxemia, ending up as human/Tiberium hybrids. They are shunned by normal society due to their mutations and are often horrifying in appearance. With the arrival and proliferation of Tiberium, civilian populations without access to shielding equipment of any sort were subject to contamination and irradiation by the element. Those who weren't killed developed physical and
