The third environmental discourse to emerge in the U.S. during the 19th century was Preservation. As economic development expanded across the U.S., there was the growth of concern regarding the disappearance of "wild" lands. In 1890, a dramatic proclamation was issued by the U.S. census bureau. Some of the well known organizations in this discursive community include Greenpeace, Environmental Defense, and the Natural Resources Defense Council. Deep Ecology. Following the rise of Reform Environmentalism in the 1960s and 1970s, there was increasing disillusion with the results that the existing environmental movement was able to realize.

"Discourses of the Environment represents an important contribution to addressing the links between poststructuralism and the environment. The divergent analyses are engaging and should provide material for debate and inquiry. Environmental theorists and practitioners will find this book of benefit, although the novelty of this intellectual effort should diminish as scholars recognise the important links between Foucault and nature." Local Environment. 'In Discourses of the Environment Eric Darier brings together nine scholars from a variety of disciplines who are all working on
