A literature review or narrative review is a type of review article. A literature review is a scholarly paper, which includes the current knowledge including substantive findings, as well as theoretical and methodological contributions to a particular topic. Literature reviews are secondary sources, and do not report new or original experimental work. Most often associated with academic-oriented literature, such reviews are found in academic journals, and are not to be confused with book reviews that What is a literature review, then? A literature review discusses published information in a particular subject area, and sometimes information in a particular subject area within a certain time period. A literature review can be just a simple summary of the sources, but it usually has an organizational pattern and combines both summary and synthesis. A summary is a recap of the important information of the source, but a synthesis is a re-organization, or a reshuffling, of that information. Literature reviews also provide a solid background for a research paper's investigation. Comprehensive knowledge of the literature of the field is essential to most research papers. Who writes these things, anyway? Integrative literature review reviews, critiques, and synthesizes secondary data about research topic in an integrated way such that new frameworks and perspectives on the topic are generated. If your research does not involve primary data collection and data analysis, then using integrative literature review will be your only option. Theoretical literature review focuses on a pool of theory that has accumulated in regard to an issue, concept, theory, phenomena. Theoretical literature reviews play an instrumental role in establishing what theories already exist, the relationships between them,

A literature review reveals the in-depth knowledge of your subject. But hold on! Don't quickly jump to the conclusion of a Book review. The title of the article discusses umpteen things. It (Literature Review), in fact, surveys and survives on scholarly articles and other sources such as dissertations and conference proceedings. In other words, it is the process of searching and evaluating the available literature in your chosen topic. There are many literature review outline examples available online. Few of them for you. Simple Performance Review Templates. Free Employee Review Templates. 10 Literature review research question. What is the relationship between customer loyalty and customer satisfaction? Search for literature using keywords and citations. Start by creating a list of keywords related to your research topic and question. Some useful databases to search for journals and articles include: Your university's library catalogue. This step will help you work out the structure of your literature review and (if applicable) show how your own research will contribute to existing knowledge. Step 3: Plan your literature review's structure. There are various approaches to organizing the body of a literature review. A literature review is not simply a chronological catalog of all your sources, but an evaluation. It pulls the previous research together, and explains how it connects to the research proposed by the current paper. All sides of an argument must be clearly explained, to avoid bias, and areas of agreement and disagreement should be highlighted. A literature review is likewise not a collection of quotes and paraphrasing from other sources. A good literature review should critically evaluate the quality and findings of the research. A good literature review should avoid the temptation of stressing Literature review is not a qualitative research method. Actually, literature review is related to preparing conceptual foundation or theory building and becomes the basis of hypotheses formulation. 11 Recommendations. All Answers (55).

Review of related literature is a requirement for every robust research whether qualitative or quantitative study approach because it is the review of related literature that offers a solid theoretical foundation for the research. A researcher creates the academic vacuum his/her research is intended to fill by craftily reviewing the related literature, justifying the need and essence of the research.
