Oct 29, 2010 Azak rated it it was amazing. 'Islam and Buddhism in the Modern World' was written when the author was just 29 and still remains the only book on the subject by a Muslim scholar. This is what A. K. Brohi had to say concerning 'Islam and Buddhism in the Modern World': What struck me most while reading Imran's magnificent book was the lucidity of, and clarity in, the treatment and almost awe-inspiring simplicity of style with which the argument has been presented by the author at first to expound and then to critically appraise what, after all, is a highly complex philosophical conception of religion by which a considerable bulk of humanity.
