Knowing full well that for the vast majority of dog owners, the answer to these questions is invariably no, veterinary specialists at Purdue University have put together a manual called "Rescuing Rover: A First Aid and Disaster Guide for Dog Owners," written by Dr. Sebastian E. Heath and illustrated by Andrea O'Shea (Purdue University Press, $12.95).^Â Of course, anticipating calamities is antithetical to the American spirit of optimism. But let's face facts: Accidents do happen, to dogs as well as to people. Dogs love to jump but can land badly and break a leg. They can step on glass and cut a foot pad, which may gush like a geyser. They can get hit by a car, tear their flesh on a jagged edge, be bitten by another dog or a snake or kicked by a horse. Rescuing Rover: A First Aid and Disaster Guide for Dog Owners.
