The concrete used for pavements can be modified and changed in various ways as per the requirement. Not only does the concrete pavement need to be strong and durable but also it must be workable and cost effective because it is commonly prone to severe environmental conditions. The success of jointed unreinforced concrete pavements depends on the tensile strength and flexural capacity of the concrete used which should withstand cracking and support imposed loads. The size of concrete pieces or panels is dependent on the concrete shrinkage strain created due to concrete hardening. Shrinkage strain creates tensile force in concrete and may cause cracks unless the tensile strength of concrete is greater than the tensile stresses generated by shrinkage strains. Learn how to use concrete to make six different kinds of DIY concrete stepping stones for your garden pathways. When you purchase dry concrete it will have instructions for mixing it on the package. You can find ready-made concrete in home improvement stores in smaller batches. Ready-made concrete is good for repair jobs or doing just a few stepping stones, but it's much more expensive. Add water as per the instructions on the bag of concrete. I like to add a little less than the instructions suggest, then mix the concrete and adjust the consistency by adding more water for a looser mix, and more concrete powder for a dryer mix. If you are pouring concrete into molds, the mix should be looser so that it pours and settles into the form.
